4. The ammunition factory has a water power station of its own which also supplies the ordnance works. Water comes to the station from the Raul Mic barrage dam which is about fifteen miles away.
5. Prior to and during the war ammunition of good quality for rifles and pistols was produced. The manufacture of ammunition was continued until 1947. Conversion to peacetime production was begun in 1946. After 1948 small hardware such as doorlocks, knives, and keys was begun. Deliveries of the plant's peacetime production are made to the Soviet Union and to various Rumanian firms.
6. Two porters and a number of watchmen provide the plant's protection.
